Background Wireless communication systems are widely deployed to provide various types of communication; for instance, voice and/or data can be provided via such wireless communication systems. A typical wireless communication system, or network, can provide multiple users access to one or more shared resources (e.g. bandwidth, transmit power, ...).

For instance, a system can use a variety of multiple access techniques such as Frequency Division Multiplexing (FDM), Time Division Multiplexing (TDM), Code Division Multiplexing (CDM), Orthogonal Frequency Division Multiplexing (OFDM), and others. Generally, wireless multiple-access communication systems can simultaneously support communication for multiple mobile devices. Each mobile device can communicate with one or more base stations via transmissions on forward and reverse links. The forward link (or downlink) refers to the communication link from base stations to mobile devices, and the reverse link (or uplink) refers to the communication link from mobile devices to base stations. This communication link can be established via a single-in-single-out, multiple-in-single-out or a multiple-in-multiple out (MIMO) system. MIMO systems commonly employ multiple (N_T) transmit antennas and multiple (N_R) receive antennas for data transmission. A MIMO channel formed by the N_T transmit and N_R receive antennas may be decomposed into N_S independent channels, which are also referred to as spatial channels, where $N_S \leq \min \{N_T, N_R\}$. Each of the N_S independent channels corresponds to a dimension. The MIMO system can provide improved performance (e.g., higher throughput and/or greater reliability) if the additional dimensionalities created by the multiple transmit and receive antennas are utilized. A MIMO system can support a time division duplex (TDD) and frequency division duplex (FDD) systems 648931e174

The patient had been diabetic for 22 years and had suffered from mouth ulceration. Imaging findings suggested lipoma. Histopathology revealed a thyroid analogue. The authors used the name thyroid lipoma to distinguish this entity from other lipomas of the tongue. They suggested that the name thyroid lipoma reflect the location of the lipoma within the sublingual space \\[@CR4\\]. In 1951, Schiff and Zukowski divided thyroid lipomas into three types: the normal thyroid lipoma, the lipofibroma of the thyroid (fibrolipoma) and the true liposarcoma \\[@CR5\\]. Their consensus was that, because of its association with thyroid cancer, the thyroid lipoma could become malignant \[@CR5\]. This was discussed in 1993 by Jacobsen, who suggested that several reviews of lipomas
